

Olh

Jane Girl of the Month

If Anna Faris could have one superpower, she'd choose flying. 'Cause, you know, she already has the power to make even the most jaded people crack up.

Admitt it: You've seen at least one Scary Movie (the series' half-billion-dollar profit can't all be blamed on guys with bongos). Besides, if the adorable, hilarious actress Anna Faris is corny enough to star in movies where bats fly out of her hoo-ha and in stuff like Lost in Translation, who are we to judge? "A guy from my high school was like, 'It's funny that you ended up in comedy, because you were always so dramatic,'" says the 29-year-old, who grew up in Seattle. "I took myself so seriously. Now I can laugh at myself for those same reasons." But the slapstick hasn't hurt her cred—she was a fizzy charmer in Brokeback Mountain, and soon you can catch her in the romantic comedy My Super Ex-Girlfriend, in which she has fight scenes with Kill Bill ass-kicking queen Uma Thurman. But that's not the most intimidating thing Anna's done for a role. "For Just Friends, I did a shoot where my boobs were covered in whipped cream with cherries, but they weren't big enough to hold the cherries up," she says. "So it was three hours with a crew of men placing them." There is so a trashy euphemistic Black Eyed Peas song title in that. —Shelly

PHOTOGRAPHY: CHRIS McPHERSON HAIR: JARDIER FOR THORNTONHAIR.COM AT SOLOARTISTS.COM MAKEUP: JAKE BAILEY FOR SOLOARTISTS.COM STYLING: FIGHT FEEL DRESS

